About Us

- The Oklahoma Access to Justice Foundation serves as a convener, collaborator, and advocate to increase meaningful participation in a civil justice system that is fair and accessible to all.
- We work with legal, judicial, and community partners to increase the availability of public legal information, advocate for fairer housing laws, and ensure legal services providers have adequate and meaningful support.

Services in Tulsa

- What is going well with the court/legal system in Tulsa?
 - The creation of the Social Services Hub in August 2021 stands as a national example of coordinated eviction response.
 - Including the Social Services Hub flyer with the court summons has increased court attendance and service uptake.
 - We are seeing record levels of tenant representation (though there are still gaps).
- How can the court/legal system improve in Tulsa?
 - Holding landlords to the same court standards as tenants (must be present).
 - More proactive education on tenant rights/landlord responsibilities.

Recommendations

How can the City help to more effectively support an individual who is experiencing homelessness?

- We must update our state landlord-tenant laws to provide basic protections against retaliation and offer meaningful access to enforcing habitability standards.
- The City can and should continue to convene stakeholders across the housing and social services spectrum to ensure coordinated and well-funded responses.
- The City should explore upstream solutions to preventing homelessness before it starts, such as investing in universal tenant representation in eviction proceedings, adequate funding for domestic violence services, and creating accessible housing for Tulsans who have faced criminal justice involvement.
